1967 pontiac gto restomod

While a lovingly restored classic muscle car is truly a thing to behold, a well-built restomod can be just as exciting. Whoever ends up buying this ride will have a serious performance machine on their hands, plus some nice comforts for cruising during those restless summer nights. The first thing you should know is this GTO is packing serious heat under the hood. A professionally-built, fuel-injected ci V8 from Butler Performance includes an Eagle balance rotating assembly, comp hydraulic roller cam, Edelbrock heads, MSD 6AL ignition, and an electronic fuel injection system they say is quite fast. Supposedly, this engine produces a mighty horsepower, plenty of have some fun around town or even to try this machine out at the drag strip. Included in the setup are long-tube headers, plus there are electric cutouts for the dual exhaust. Also throw in there is an aluminum radiator with dual electric fans, StrongArms suspension, and a TH 3-speed automatic transmission with a limited-slip Ford 9-inch rear and Strange Engineering axles. Oh, and to help you maintain control of this beast, Baer four-wheel power disc brakes with drilled and slotted rotors, power steering, and ZR-rated tires are also in there. Other amenities include a center console with cupholders, power locks, power windows, backup camera, sound system with touchscreen, satellite navigation, and a Ridetech controller for the air ride suspension. In the end, this restomod is a fantastic way to celebrate the Pontiac GTO, the vehicle many feel kicked off the muscle car movement. Larger displacement and more powerful engines notwithstanding despite the loss of Tri-Power and what the horsepower ratings said , the '67 model year also brought with it the optional Turbo three-speed automatic transmission, front disc brakes, hood tach, Rally II wheels, Wide Oval Tires and a host of safety features. In short, in just a few years since its introduction the GTO had grown into a sophisticated musclecar. Seeing a '67 GTO restored to concours condition is a treat for the eyes and a nostalgic walk down memory lane to be sure. But tastefully modified '67 GTOs are highly appealing as well with improved straightline performance and handling and braking to match their Pontiac-bred style. Safe to say that this model year GTO is a favorite amongst aficionados. But Steve's '67 Goat comes with a twist. It was restored to concours condition--and was done well enough to make any well-heeled judge swoon--but it was also modified to go fast, encompassing the best of two factions of this great hobby in a single sultry package. Like any in-depth project, it wasn't completed overnight. In fact one could argue that the seed of inspiration was planted in the Westmont, Illinois, resident's mind in his senior year of high school back in , a full 23 years before Steve even purchased this GTO. I went to college so I couldn't buy one for myself," he laments, having to make due with a '61 Ventura, which wasn't such a bad deal. After years of enjoyment and owning a bevy of other musclecars of the era, Steve finally bought this '67 in He remembers, "It was a rust-free numbers-matching California car with no Bondo. The body, which retained all of its original panels was stripped to bare metal and any small dents were repaired before it was primered, block sanded, sealed, and shot with three coats of PPG urethane basecoat in Signet Gold. It was then wet sanded, cleared with PPG urethane clear with wet sanding between each coat, and finally the finish was buffed. They included: tilt column, rear speaker, 3. Once the project was completed, Steve took to the track with the stock on street tires running Knowing full-well that he may be pushing his luck racing the numbers-matching at the track on a regular basis, Lucas pulled the original engine and tucked it into the garage. He then installed a built in but retained a stock look up top with the GTO's heads and intake. The Pontiac Performance Engineering-built two-bolt main '72 engine features a. Centerline is degrees. The Morton, Illinois, engine builder also installed the heads but not before they were treated to an intake bowl massage, a three-angle valve job and Comp Cams valve springs. Stock replacement 2. A 68 Ram Air Q-jet carb. This dual snorkel unit feeds buckets of cold atmosphere to the carb via the large tubes that run from the sealed air cleaner assembly to the hi-beam headlight pods. Backing the potent plant is a Coan inch 3. stall converter directing the torque through the original Turbo that was rebuilt by Transmission Repair Service in Orland Park, Illinois. The trans now features a shift kit, HD clutches and other upgrades. A His and Hers shifts it and an aftermarket cooler with a fan tucked under the passenger side floor board cools the fluid. At the far end of the driveshaft is the factory bolt Pontiac with a fresh Auburn posi and 3. When it comes to roadability, stock is nice but mildly modded is better. While the factory springs and. In the rear, stock springs and boxed control arms are complimented by Monroe air shocks, No-Hop bars for better launches and a. A set of '69 single-piston caliper disc brakes was installed to aid the 9. At the strip a set of 26x10x15 Hoosier slicks get the nod. Since its completion, Lucas' Goat has won several awards at events around the country both in the show arena with multiple first place in Popular Vote and Altered Restored and Best of Show honors and on the race track in bracket races and burnout contests. Here's the driving technique that wins races as explained by Steve, " I do a smoky burnout to heat up the tires but do no dry hops. I then shallow stage the GTO, footbrake to 2, rpm and launch after the last yellow light is on. This with 22 pounds of air in the slicks and a race weight of 4, pounds with a little over half tank gas. Curb weight is 3, pounds. As you can see, Lucas went along way to make his GTO appear to be a mildly modified concours restored Pontiac, while the truth of the matter is that it's quite a bit more than mildly modified. Though the ram-air system, headers, custom gauge console and exposed MSD ignition parts in the interior do not cloak their intent, many other mods are so subtle that the uninitiated will assume that they are stock. Take for instance the engine transplant that retains the factory heads, the disc brake swap, the Auburn posi, redline radials, etc. As he states, "I built it the way I wanted it. It would seem that in this case, "The Great One" has only become Close Ad. Thomas A. DeMauro writer, Share on Facebook Share on Twitter. This solid GTO arrived at our shop as a stalled restoration project with a very solid Texas body. The owner came with a plan for his ultimate GTO. This finely-tuned restomod offers horsepower from a custom-tuned dry-sump LS7, Tremec TKO 5-speed, modern suspension and brakes. A full gallery documenting the build is included at the bottom of the page. We comprehensively rebuilt this GTO into a thoroughly modern performance car while retaining the character and look of the original car. Automotion Classics installed a complete Hotchkiss Stage 2 suspension kit with tubular control arms, larger sway bars, lowering springs and QA1 shocks all around. The brakes have been upgraded with a The Right Stuff Inc. Like the donor car, the LS7 features dry sump oiling with a remote-mounted oil tank. The engine is fitted with a set of Kooks long-tube headers, a full stainless steel Magnaflow exhaust with an X-pipe. The cabin has been modernized with a set of Dakota digital gauges, later-style center console, and stock-patterned upholstery from Legendary Interiors. We fitted a power window conversion with chrome BMW-style switches mounted in the center console. This car was completed in December , and the builder who commissioned the car is moving on to other projects. The car is now available through Automotion Classics. It was even one of the fastest cars that Pontiac had ever built, thanks to its powerful V8 engines. That was history, but if you want to get a piece of this historical machine, then this Pontiac GTO is worth a look. It was indeed grand as the option featured a hp 6. The first generation of the GTO lasted from to model years. Thus, the Pontiac GTO in subject here is part of the first-gen model. For the model year, the GTO was powered primarily by a large V8 mill delivering three levels of engine power up to hp of output and lb. The GTO was then the envy of other carmakers. This muscle car is well-maintained as it boasts a mirror shine exterior with some paint bubbles with no tears on the upholstery. According to the listing, this Pontiac GTO is partially restored and is powered by a rebuilt 7. While its power ratings are unknown, this GTO engine should be very powerful, with the output and torque sent to the rear wheels through a four-speed transmission and Hurst shifter. Riding on staggered wheels â€" inch front and wider inch rims with BFG tires â€" this Pontiac GTO is still in good running condition despite being 53 years old. Source: C lassiccars. that's because this one looks like it drove straight out of the underworld. It's a beautifully sinister look as the flames consume the front end and give you hint even down the body line. And where this GTO isn't on fire, you've got a sleek black made even sleeker by the deleted trim and shaved door handles. It's such an outlaw that even the Asanti inch wheels have skulls in them! Plus, bright chrome bumpers, even brighter HID headlights, and awesome sheetmetal show off that even the details are done with quality. Remote door poppers always attract attention, and it's fine to draw a crowd, because there's a lot to check out inside. A restomod is all about giving you the best in modern features, and so this has been upgraded with the leather seats from the final model GTO. And not only does the front get power-adjusting buckets, but also the rear gets individual buckets, too. There are great custom upholstery touches, like the full-length cup holder center console and mean GTO badging stitched into the seatbacks. Plus, the suede inserts of the seats match the doors for a well-done custom experience. There are other modern luxuries, like power windows, power locks, provisions for air conditioning will need servicing , and a Ridetech controller that lets you dial-in your ideal air ride stance. There's an artful touch with the flame-kissed look on the center console and Ididit tilt steering column, and that goes with the red machine-turned dash kit. The TruFire style seamlessly flows into the engine bay, which is just another signal of a well-planed and expensive build. And this one earns its fire with a Butler Performance cubic-inch Pontiac V8. The full setup is said to produce over horsepower! It fires up with a sweet rumble as long tube headers feed the dual exhaust, and any time you really want to bring the thunder, there are electric cutouts. As you look underneath the car, you'll realize this is the kind you put a mirror under at the shows. That way people can see everything from the flame-kissed boxed frame to the StrongArms suspension. And the stout components prove that this one is for more than just show. This is the distinct, custom, and big power GTO you've been waiting for, so don't let it slip away. Call today!!! This is one of those rare cars that has everyone here at the shop fighting for the keys! Unlike most of the 'purple' Pontiacs that we've seen, this beauty is a factory Plum Mist M car. Slide behind the wheel and enjoy the view of the excellent dash with correct walnut veneer, correct black interior , taut headliner, and the glistening Hurst shifter. Turn the key, however, and you'll begin to understand what this beautiful machine is all about. I have driven many GTO's over the years, but none were quicker. To handle the horsepower the detailed chassis features numerous upgrades including tubular steel upper and lower A-arms, new boxed trailing arms, new upper links, new bushings, new heavy duty front and rear sway bars, and power Hydroboost 4-wheel disc brakes with drilled and slotted rotors. Now for the interesting part. Extensive documentation, though inconclusive, includes an invoice from Royal Pontiac and a letter from a PHS employee stating that he thinks this car was ordered by Tony Knieper before his death. Vehicle Description. What do you get when you take the GTO and turn it up to 11? Maybe something like this Pontiac GTO hardtop. It packs a fuel-injected LS1 made of aluminum, a gorgeous interior, and the right hardware to make it very fast but totally streetable. If you like the idea of a GTO that takes no prisoners, this incredible restomod won't disappoint. The red paint is bright and beautifully applied, but at a glance, there's nothing to tip you off that this car is anything but a garden-variety Goat. There's no mistaking the GTO DNA at work here, from the stacked headlights and mesh grilles to the beautiful Coke-bottle shape, and while it's not a real GTO, the badges are just where they should be. The paint is indeed worthy of scrutiny, a beautiful finish that's deep and lustrous and is exactly the right color to grab everyone's attention as you cruise into the show. There are plenty of OEM-grade details, ranging from the modest hood scoop to the mesh grille inserts and handsome taillights out back. All the factory chrome and stainless trim remains intact, so it has a very correct look and it would be easy to mistake for a purely stock GTO. The beautiful black bucket seat interior has plenty of factory hardware, but at the same time, it was obviously built for the street. All the soft parts are new and correct reproductions, so it looks right, and there's a proper wood-rimmed steering wheel, although it's a bit thicker than original-issue. White-faced Auto Meter gauges replace the original dials and give a better view of the upgraded engine, but the secondary controls remain intact. You'll note that the factory his-n-hers shifter has been subtly tweaked to work with the modern R4 4-speed automatic transmission now living underneath and the illusion is fairly convincing. The trunk is tidy with a rubber mat and stereo equipment, but none of it gets in the way so you can feel free to hit the road with this Poncho. The hardware is what truly makes this car special, and the LS1 V8 under the hood is extremely impressive. Pulled from a late-model GTO seems appropriate , it's an all-aluminum block so handling is sharp and with as much OEM hardware as possible, it drives like a stocker. Everything is OEM quality, from the cool GTO cam covers to the accessory drive to the big electric fans keeping i t cool a big aluminum radiator certainly helps. The transmission is a 4L60E 4-speed automatic linked to a bolt rear end, as original. It runs and drives beautifully, with great road manners and surprisingly good fuel economy thanks to the efficient LS1 motor. This is modern performance packaged as a vintage car, and thanks to the wonders of fuel injection, you'll be shocked by how well it works. Better still, it's all wrapped in bright red bodywork that will make everyone stop and stare. Call today! Sign up for our daily newsletter. Get Newsletter. Get our app. Help Center.
