A pressure washer is a tool which has been used for years by car cleaning enthusiasts and professionals alike. If you have read any of my other posts on this blog you know that I am an advocate for safe car washing, so it is worth mentioning that using a pressure washer in your car cleaning routine is also good for your cars paintwork. Blasting dirt away is always less risky than shifting it by wiping it with a wash mitt. For those of you who are looking to start snow foaming your car , owning a half-decent pressure washer will really set you up for success here, as most good snow foaming systems will require that you use one. Some high powered petrol or gas pressure washers These are more suited for cleaning your patio than for using on your pride and joy. However, you can buy a pressure washer with a higher power and twist the nozzle to reduce this making it safe to use on your car, if you are just intending to use it for car cleaning, then there is no need to get anything that is over PSI. However, for it to cause damage, you will most likely need to apply direct pressure straight from the nozzle and onto your vehicle at a close range. It is recommended that no matter what type of pressure washer you are using and regardless of what PSI it has, you should always start at about 24 inches away from the targeted area and move in no closer than 12 inches to it. A safety tip that I always give is that you should choose a pressure washer with a setting of â€" PSI. These usually come in the form of Electric Powered Washers. It is completely safe to use a pressure washer on a Ceramic Coated Car. Again, once you stay within the safe PSI limits for the paintwork, the same principle applies for the ceramic coating. In fact, for ceramic coated cars I highly recommend the use of a Foam cannon combined with a pressure washer for cleaning, as it will help get the best out of your coating. A lot of dirt and grime can be removed from a coated car by just using a pressure washer alone, thanks to the self-cleaning effect of the coating. As I mentioned above it is actually more beneficial for you not to use something that is overpowered and not suitable for the job. Sure you can spend lots of money on a pressure washer for other purposes, but when it comes to cleaning your car something middle of the road will do you just fine. When it comes down to my own choices I usually go for something with a trusted and well-known brand and which has proven reliability to last the test of time. These often appear to have all the cleaning features you might want, at a low price. But they do tend to be cheaply made and lack the power to clean. It is important to look out for packages that come with attachments designed for use on your car wheel brushes are common extras. Different models come with different accessories, so make sure you pick one that has useful attachments for cleaning, a wheel brush, soft brush fitment, and a foam bottle that can be added between the hose and spray gun which is ideal for snow foaming your car. Below are some of my recommendations to get you started using a pressure washer in your car cleaning routine. Karcher is probably one of the first brands that you will think of in terms of a pressure washer and is one of the biggest names in the business. The First pressure washer I ever bought for my car was a Karcher and it did not disappoint This particular Karcher is not the most expensive washer in their range, but it is more than adequate for your car cleaning needs as it provides the sweet spot PSI of pressure which really is the most you will ever need for detailing. Full Specification and pricing available Here. Karcher is a trusted brand which will not break the bank, and they usually provide a nice warranty on their products too. The K5 is a no brainer if you are considering a middle of the road priced pressure washer for cleaning your car. The Karcher K2 is another superb choice for those looking to clean their car with a pressure washer. The K2 is my recommended choice for those on a budget or looking to pick up a pressure washer for a bit cheaper. This particular Karcher is about half the price of the K5 listed above, but should still provide more than adequate cleaning power at about PSI. This is another product I recommend to those who are maybe picking up their very first pressure washer for using on their car as there is usually a nice bundle available which will come with some extra car cleaning goodies. If you are after a nice little compact pressure washer for cleaning your car a few times a month then this is a great option. It is well priced, comes with everything you need to get going and has enough power to do a great job. If you have a bigger budget then you can spend more and get more power such as the K5 Above. The SPX is not short of accessories either, included are the two separate detergent tanks, inch extension wand, foot high-pressure hose, foot power cord, garden hose adapter, 5 quick-connect spray tips and more. Similar to the other products listed above, the sun joe is by no means the most powerful or expensive pressure washer you can buy, but it is more than enough for cleaning your car and can be picked up for a pretty cheap price. This is another ideal choice for someone looking to add to their detailing tools. If you are considering buying a pressure washer for use in your car detailing routine I would highly recommend it as there are many benefits to be gained with a small investment of money. As I mentioned many times throughout this post there is absolutely no need to be spending large amounts of cash on a pressure washer for the sole purpose of cleaning your car. However, if you intend to buy something for you to get used around your house as well as cleaning your car, you may want to opt for something with a little more power, but from a pure car detailing perspective there is simply no need to be spending wads of cash and any of the options I have listed above will do just fine. If you have any recommendations or questions about the products above, please feel free to leave a comment and I will do my best to answer. If you have any pressure washer tips when it comes to car cleaning I would love to hear them! We scour the Earth to find the newest, most unique and useful items in the automotive aftermarket. We also try to stay abreast of the most current trends and products in car care and car accessories so we can offer them to you first! Before we decide if an item makes the site, these products must undergo and pass our rigorous testing and approval procedures. Testing at AutoGeek goes something like this: a new item arrives at the warehouse and, on a rotating schedule--we'd go broke if everyone here got to try everything--staff members check out the product on their own cars, or a neighbor's, or a friend's, to see if it is indeed worthy. It seems that the most popular items to test are car care products, microfiber towels, etc. Working here does have its perks. Once there has been sufficient time for the item to prove, or disprove its usefulness, we have a staff meeting to get everyone acquainted with the new product. That's why we have one of the most knowledgeable sales staffs you'll ever deal with. They forced me to say that! All joking aside, we strive to bring
