Did you miss your activation email? Author Topic: Anyone using Vectorstock. Read times. I just signed up with Vectorstock I got my confirmation e-mail from them and the headline was "VectorStock - Artist Request Responce" - now mind you that's a form letter for acceptance Very strange. Then I opened the e-mail and when I found out I was accepted I clicked on the vectorstock link to go to their site and start uploading work This makes a newby real suspicious I want to believe they're legit - but I've already come across these two unprofessional errors in mere seconds of signing up! I signed up a while back but have not yet uploaded anything. I had a weird feeling about them too - but quite honestly can't put my finger on what it was that held me back, I wanted to do more research before sending them my files but I haven't gotten around to checking into them yet - got busy uploading to the other sites and never pursued it. If you go for it, I would be curious to know how it goes - I am still interested in uploading there if they are worth anything. There are a couple of other threads on here about vector stock so you might want to check those out. My impression is that the site is growing and people are getting some sales. I also signed up and have twice attempted to upload. Resizing the thumbnail is a pain, and I haven't figured out how to get images that aren't at a relatively square shape to fit those dimensions with out looking stretched, but I'm probably missing something. I've also noticed that their site is very slow. I've only got 3mbps internet but it takes anywhere from 5 to 30 seconds for each of their pages to load. I uploaded about 8 images - and it IS such a pain having to resize all the artwork to x But you don't have to fill the entire space. You just have to fit the image within those dimensions. I just shrink my illustration until it's within those parameters and leave all the white space. And I tried finding another thread about vectorstock They also don't have a forum in their site Unless they change that pricing policy and actually assign some of those higher prices to complex images, I'm staying away. One positive thing I should note, however, is that they are very quick and responsive with copyright violation issues. I had a few images stolen and posted by someone else on Vectorstock, and they were very quick and helpful in removing them. JerryL5 Blessed by God's wonderful love. Quote from: meshaq on March 10, , Quote from: cthoman on March 10, , Quote from: helix7 on March 10, , Where's the shutterstock styled http upload form? Where's the FTP? You can send them the files and they'll upload them for you. Quote from: Randomway on March 11, , That's just ridiculous. I'm still on the fence about this one and have been giving it some more consideration lately. Anyone have any luck with Vectorstock? Has anyone gotten a file priced at more than 1 credit? Quote from: helix7 on July 08, , I've sent them over vectors though the ftp they send you by request, and guess what??? Terrible price and awful comission level, not a winning combo. , , Quote from: cidepix on July 15, , Quote from: michaeldb on July 15, , Quote from: whatalife on July 16, , I paid 25 dollars for credits on March I have the invoice sent by them, as well as credit card history. In november, I have returned to check my account with all the credits removed. No purchase history, no transaction history, no credits. I've sent 2 emails over the course of 1 month to them asking for refund with no reply. Classic fraudulent website. Ancient thread alert. Interesting to note they never came through with any of their promises to review prices. There have also been threads about them promising to raise prices on specific files then not doing it. Terrible site that can't be trusted IMHO. Anyone who sells at vectorstock? Vectorstock Pricing: Too Cheap? MicrostockGroup Sponsors. July 02, , by vicu. September 16, , by dacascas.
